Bella Hadid recently traveled with her closest friends this past week to celebrate her 24th birthday. Posting on all social media platforms from Instagram to TikTok, Bella pulled out all of the stops to showcase her new style. Heavily influenced by the early 2000s, she rocked everything from body chains to tinted sunglasses. In true Y2K manor, neon colors are a must and Bella brought the neon back with her to New York!

Arriving back in New York last weekend, the supermodel wore a vintage hot pink sweater with "Polo Jeans" embellished on the front. Straight leg dark denim jeans, black chunky boots, Bella's signature dark brunette hair styled with a claw clip and her Balenciaga "Ghost String" bag finished off her look.

Bella's style has recently changed after the recent pandemic, she is now usually seen sporting light washed distressed jeans and shoulder bags. Her shift into vintage style can be dated back to her photoshoot campaign with Versace for the new Dylan Blue fragrance. After the fragrance was released, Bella took to Instagram to post the many pictures she took from sneaking a disposable camera onto the set.

The rise of thrifting and vintage clothing has to do with the fact of the fashion industry and the major issues faced with sustainability. Bella is one of society’s major style icons right now, and her nod to the Y2k era brings more awareness to apps like Depop where the latest vintage pieces can be found instead of shopping fast fashion.
